

Mark Danowsky

For The Record

"Photography is not about the thing photographed," Winogrand once said. "It is about how that thing looks photographed." -The Atlantic

In this time of visual capture when we snap for now without a doubt
or doubting to bother
if we will look back it only occurs to me after what is likely the sole instance we three together
there is no proof
nothing to show
or rather show off
to the unknown future
concerned parties
who may get it wrong

Mark Danowsky is a writer from Philadelphia and author of the poetry collection As Falls Trees (NightBallet Press, 2018). His poems have appeared in About Place, Cordite, Gargoyle, The Healing Muse, Kestrel, Right Hand Pointing, Shot Glass Journal, Subprimal, Third Wednesday, and elsewhere. He is Managing Editor for the Schuylkill Valley Journal and Co-Founder of Wood & Water Press.