

Tom Lyons

Nimbus

Miss Stewart became a Gardner First there was Jack she cultivated him early on Jack opened the worlds flora to Isabella who in turn nurtured rare books then fostered Art and Artifacts as her inanimate fauna her gardens well founded she championed the arts and artists Sargent's painting of her as patron saint deemed too risqué for the likes of Boston got banished for a decade ultimately unveiled once again Halo deserved Halo preserved

Tom Lyons is the owner of the New England Mobile Book Fair, an independent book store in Newton MA where readings of Poetry are held by published poets. Mysteries, fiction and non-fiction readings by local and internationally known authors are also held on a regular basis. His first chapbook came out in late 2016, He has published in Scimitar and Song, Muddy River Review, and Boston Literary Magazine. He has been featured on Milton and Somerville Access TV, and has been a featured poet at The Newton Free and Brookline Free Libraries. His next book of poetry is coming out later this year. Tom has written a western and is working on a mystery.