

Frank Bonacorso

What Remains

As we hung out in the rafters and looked down on what remains Scattered in the coal we stretch out our hands for divine handshakes with strangers winter months so isolating As the dog takes to the snow and the rain to the sky listen to the ancient wisdom of the birds we have all flown
But now we see the tribesman and his daughter secretly waiting for a new beginning In the unknown universe

Frank Bonacorso is from Swampscott, MA but now resides in Cambridge, MA. He began writing poetry at the age of 23 after hearing "Howl" by Allen Ginsberg. His influences in addition to Ginsberg are Charles Bukowski, Jim Morrison, Charles Wright and Ariana Reines.